: Biography :

D.W. Lichtenberg is 23 years old & living in San Francisco. He is the author of THE ANCIENT BOOK OF HIP, an exploration of the phenomenon of hip, to be released November 2009. He is a writer, a filmmaker, a caffeine addict, an obsessive cleaner.

His filmography can be found on IMDB. He attended NYU where he obtained a BFA in Film. His credits include associate editor on feature film FIFTH FORM & camera operator on feature documentary FOOL IN A BUBBLE.

His writings include THE ANCIENT BOOK OF HIP, winner of the 2009 Michael Rubin Chapbook Award, and SUMMER SHOWERS, a novel without a home. He attends SFSU where he's working towards an MFA in Creative Writing.

DWL grew up on the Main Line outside of Philadelphia. He also lived in New York City, where he wrote the bulk of his work. He hopes one day to meet J.D. Salinger.

: Philosophy :

To leave behind the dusty traditions of conventional literary fiction & poetry.

To create literature that normal people can read, understand, and enjoy.

To do this without sacrificing any higher artistic pursuit. & to do this without admitting belief in any sort of higher artistic pursuit.

To be funny.

To be sad.

To be unpoetic & boring & silent & loud at the same time.

To convince J.D. Salinger to go on a cross country road trip.

To be a dick without being a dick. To be a nice guy without being a nice guy.

To convince Belle & Sebastian to collaborate on a musical.

To keep it real.
